Words and music by Rod Hall

['Reflective and Poignant']

[Intro in G]

[V1:]

G C D G
Do you ev-er think of Eng-land when it's four on a shell-shocked morn-ing?
C G D
You try stay-ing a-wake, lad, when your bo-dy cries for rest.
G C D G
You try think-ing of he-roes when the best friend that you ev-er had
C G D Em
Is ly-ing out in No-Man's Land with a bul-let in the chest.

[Chorus:]

C G D G
Oh------- I can still hear the brass band play-ing.
C G D
I can still see us sing-ing and march-ing while they take young men off to war.
C Am G D Em
Oh---------- If they real-ly want to make me hap-py,
C G
Then they've got to march me down from the top of this hill
D Em
That they marched me up be-fore.

[V2:]

G C D G
There's a qui-et place be-hind the lines where cross-es stand in row on row.
C G D
The list of miss-ing and woun-ded grows long-er ev-ery day.
G C D G
Kitch-en-er told us when we joined we'd be proud to hold our heads up high,
C G D Em
Don't try do-ing that here, Son, you'll throw your life a-way.

[Chorus:]

C G D G
Oh------- I can still hear the brass band play-ing.
C G D
I can still see us sing-ing and march-ing while they take young men off to war.
C Am G D Em
Oh---------- If they real-ly want to make me hap-py,
C G
Then they've got to march me down from the top of this hill
D Em
That they marched me up be-fore.

[Chorus (a capella)]

Oh------- I can still hear the brass band play-ing.
I can still see us sing-ing and march-ing while they take young men off to war.
Oh---------- If they real-ly want to make me hap-py,
Then they've got to march me down from the top of this hill
That they marched me up be-fore.
